

Child Safety Notice re Loren Quick

As a grandmother, I feel a deep responsibility to speak when the safety of children may be involved. With the upcoming Special Meeting rounds approaching, I believe it's important that you are aware of a recent matter concerning Loren Quick.

Loren has acknowledged an incident involving inappropriate physical interaction with a minor and has expressed regret.

The parents who witnessed the behavior were troubled enough to notify law enforcement.

They also notified Greg Harger, overseer.

A police report was subsequently filed, December 2025, and I understand the matter may still be under review.

I do not know whether Loren has received counseling or any professional evaluation.

However, Loren's name currently appears on the Special Meeting list, and this may include visits to homes in Indiana or Michigan where children are present.

Speaking simply as a grandmother who treasures the safety and innocence of children, I strongly encourage that thoughtful precautions be taken during these rounds and that parents remain attentive and proactive regarding their children's wellbeing.

My intention is not to pass judgment, but to ensure awareness and to encourage appropriate safeguarding.

The well-being of our children must always come first.

Sincerely, Sally VanSickle

Statement of Facts

On the listed date and time, person number 1 had person number 2 in their home for a ministry program, where a minister stays in the home, joins them for dinner, then joins them for church on Sunday. Person 1 informed me on 12/12/2025 that during the period that person 2 had stayed in her home, he had been making strange advances to her 12 year old son. She advised that person number 2 had been essentially messing with her son by putting his arm around him numerous times, almost like a light choke hold. Her son told him to stop, and was tired of it, calling him a bully. Afterwards, person 2 was making for advances asking "Can I bully you?" numerous times. Person number 1 began feeling uncomfortable with the situation, and had her son stay in her and her husband's room for the night due to person number 2 staying over. The next day, 12/04/2025, person 1 had left for work, while her husband and son were at home with person 2. Her husband advised that he had also seen the incident occur, as well as other who came by later for a get together and supper. She advised person 2 had left the following day, but had a strange feeling so she wanted to make an informational report for documentation purposes. She advised that she did not have any other identifiers for person 2 besides his first and last name, a possible address ([Redacted], Grand Blanc, MI, 48439) and a possible birth year (1964). I advised to consult an attorney and civil for the possibility of a restraining order, and advised to report if he did come back to their residence.
